BORDEN ON G. T. P.

The Opposition Leader Expresses His Views

(Special to the Bulletin).

Ottawa, Aug. 26.—Hon. Mr. Borden, leader of the opposition, spoke last night on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill. He would build from Moncton to Minot de L'Isle as a government work, paralleling the Intercolonial. He would buy the Canada Atlantic to Depot Harbor and build 56 miles of connection with the Intercolonial. He would buy out the C. P. R. Lake Superior line for use as railway highways and buy running rights over the C. P. R. and the G. N. R. from Lake Superior to the Red River. He would add the G. T. P. from Winnipeg to Edmonton, north of the G. N. R. and would add the G. T. P. and the C. N. R. to jointly build one line from Edmonton to the Pacific coast. He would improve lake and ocean ports and canals. He was willing to spend plenty of money to provide transportation.

The debate still continues and will last until next week.

Elevators for Edmonton

The Brackman-Ker Milling Company and the Alberta Grain Company have announced to the Edmonton city council their definite intention to immediately commence the construction of two large grain elevators at the site of the new Canadian Northern station. They are acting on an assurance from the Canadian Northern Railway company that the rails will be laid to carry this year's crop out from Edmonton. Both companies point out that the present space allotted for elevators is too small and request the co-operation of the city council of Edmonton in having the site slightly changed so as to have good dry foundations for their elevators. The matter has been referred to the city engineer with power to act on the matter.

ESTIMATES PASSED

The City Council Transacts Much Business

The regular meeting of the city council was held yesterday evening in the usual place. His Worship Mayor Short and Councillors Heinrich, Grierson, Fraser, Ross and Cushing were present. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and adopted.

P. McNaughton, engineer in charge at the power house, in a communication to the council reported that the deep well pumps furnished by the Northern Company were unsatisfactory, supporting this statement by several arguments. After considerable discussion it was decided to refer this matter to Engineers Ashbridge and Armstrong, to look into the matter and report at the next regular meeting of the council. In connection with this a complaint was laid that the electric lights were turned off before day-break. Engineer Armstrong was instructed to draw up a schedule of hours for the guidance of the electric light engineer.

A communication was read from the government commission inquiring into the alleged lumber combine in the west, asking whether evidence of a combine could be given at Edmonton. The secretary-treasurer was instructed to write to the commissioners and arrange a date for the sitting of the commission at Edmonton, the arrangements to be conducted in conjunction with the Edmonton Board of Trade, with the Edmonton Board of Trade.

City policeman Rudd asked that four police whistles, a revised criminal code and Clark's Magistrate's Manual be purchased for the use of the city police. Permission was given to procure these articles.

The secretary-treasurer of the Edmonton fire brigade requested the purchasing of a brass sliding pole, a triple arm bell and other fire brigade apparatus. This request was referred to the engineer.

A report was presented from W. T. Ashbridge on the position from C. Robert and others for the extension of the sewerage system to serve their locality. The position was not in regular form. Application for a sewer to serve Sixth street was referred to the engineer.

The secretary-treasurer of the Edmonton Protestant public school board requested the immediate payment of $16,000 taxes due them by the town. The Town Clerk was instructed to notify the school board that the taxes would be paid over when collected.

The city solicitor was instructed to prepare a by-law to give the city authority to prohibit the erection of certain or other objectionable buildings within certain limits.

The estimates were then dealt with and the following rates struck:

Debtenture rate, 2 mills.

Protestant school rate, 6 1/2 mills.

Roman Catholic school rate, 5 mills.

Thus the rate is 16 1/2 mills for Protestants and 15 mills for Roman Catholics.

By-law 255, to authorize the levying of a rate to provide money to meet the general expenditure, was given its third reading and was finally passed.

By-law 258, to order the execution of the agreement between the Canadian Northern railway company and the city of Edmonton, received three readings and was finally passed.

The secretary-treasurer was authorized to advertise the sale of debentures in different financial papers, and to give information on the matter printed.

Constable Dean was appointed chief of police for Edmonton on a four to two division of the council.

Several accounts were ordered to be paid and the council adjourned.

FROM OTTAWA.

Bulletin Correspondence.
The debate on the second reading of the Grand Trunk Pacific subsidy bill was opened yesterday by Mr. Blair. His pronouncement had been anxiously awaited, and up to the moment he rose to speak, the position which he would take was absolutely unknown to either side of the House. There had been rumors that he would give but a mild opposition to the proposals, and would subside into the chairmanship of the railway commission, recently provided for in the bill which he had just successfully carried through parliament when he resigned. Any such expectation was dispelled in the early sentences of his speech. He assumed an attitude of uncompromising hostility to the scheme throughout, and placed himself in an attitude which can only be followed by open warfare between himself and the government. Thoroughly versed in railway questions and especially in the workings of the Intercolonial railway, he spoke from a standpoint occupied by no other member of the House, and one which gave the greatest possible force to every criticism he offered. He covered the subject in all its departments and found objection to each one. Usually his explanations are characterized by a measure of indecisiveness, but on this occasion he was absolutely definite and strongly pronounced on each point, enforcing the argument both by sarcasm and denunciation. At the same time his speech throughout was on a high level and the personal question was not in evidence except to the most limited degree. An exception was a sneaking allusion to Senator Cox's connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific. There were also sarcastic references to passages in the premier's speech, which although not in themselves personal, must certainly have aroused a measure of personal resentment on the part of the premier. Taken altogether, it was a speech such as has not been heard in parliament in many years, and marked the ex-Minister of Railways as one of the biggest men in Canadian public life today. Needless to say the every point was cheered to the echo by the opposition and received a silence which was not the silence of consent by the supporters of the government. No word in his remarks could be construed as indicating any desire to associate himself with the opposition, but the fact that they were so ready to accept his every statement would seem to indicate their willingness to accept him. The one weakness of his speech was that he proved too much. He proved that Canada did not want, and especially did not now need, another transcontinental railway. He proved that Canada could not afford the cost entailed by the bargain. He proved that it was improper, wasteful and destructive to build parallel and competing lines of railway. He proved that the Northwest did not require nor in the future any additional trunk line between the C. P. R. and the proposed Canadian Northern. Such a line might be necessary north of the Canadian Northern, but not south of it. He proved that no agreement made with a railway company can be made binding upon it. He proved that it was destructive to build parallel railways in the Maritime provinces, it was impossible for two railway companies to use the one line between Quebec and Winnipeg. In fact he proved so much and so conclusively, that the conviction was forced that the mere facts were less important to his argument than the side he was on. The force of his reasoning and the strength of his position may be judged by the fact that no member of the government felt himself competent to reply at once, and Mr. Charlton was put up on behalf of the government to fill in the time until the main of argument which Mr. Blair had put forward could be carefully digested so that his points could be adequately met.

He first dealt with Sir Wilfrid's contention as to the necessity of the line because of a danger of the abolition of the bonding privileges. Against this he pointed out that the Intercolonial now gave connection through Canadian territory to Canadian winter ports, and declared his opinion that if the proposed route between Quebec and Moncton were followed it would have to enter United States territory for a short distance at one point. His position shortly stated was that there was no demand or need for the immediate construction of a second transcontinental railway. The probable future need of such a railway should be provided for by acquiring information by means of surveys through what is at present unknown territory before a hard and fast bargain was entered into. The present needs of the country could best meet by the extension of the Intercolonial to Georgian Bay and the building of a government line from the head of Lake Superior to and through Manitoba and the west and on to the Pacific coast. At the same time he admitted that he had little hope of securing support from either side of the House for this proposition. He laid great stress on the immense expense that had been incurred in improving the Intercolonial and extending it to Montreal, and the financial result that so far had been achieved. By the government building another line paralleling the Intercolonial between Quebec and Moncton those vast expenditures which had been incurred to make the Intercolonial a first-class through railway would be thrown away, and another era of Intercolonial deficits would ensue. He quoted surveyors' reports to prove that the saving in distance between Quebec and Moncton by any practicable line, would be only from 63 to 77 miles, as compared with the Intercolonial; and this, he said, was nothing in comparison with the necessarily much better grades which existed on the Intercolonial. If, he said, the contract had provided for building down the St. John Valley to the city of St. John there would have been an important shortening of distance to Canada's nearest winter ocean port, and greater good would have been secured. He estimated the cost of the Quebec-Moncton section at fifteen millions, and the Quebec-Winnipeg section at fifty millions, a total of sixty-five millions for the government line. Adding interest to be paid during construction, and guaranteed on western section, he made the total liabilities up to one hundred and twenty millions, just ten times more than the total cost given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his speech. An evidence of the fact that figures cannot be taken as at least to be made to say strange things. Towards the conclusion of his address he was subjected to a measure of interruption by government supporters, but his sharp retorts soon quieted them. The following is the conclusion of Mr. Blair's speech:

"I fully realize that so far as I may have made a strong presentation of the case against the government's policy, just to that extent it will operate to the prejudice of the status of my friends on this side of the House. I regret that extremely, but it was absolutely unavoidable. I had to justify myself and I have endeavored to do so with no feelings of bitterness, no feeling of acrimony, but with the determination to put the case just as it presented itself to my mind and I am prepared to take the consequences of my own action. I can say that I have the satisfaction in my own mind and conscience that I did not lend myself by word or action to the maintenance of the course now taken by the government, which I think must be disastrous to the best interest of Canada. I would be glad if any appeal I am making could reach the ears of those controlling the matter though I know that appeal would be in vain; I would appeal to them to think more before pressing the matter, and for their own sakes, if for no one else's, to think what would be the consequences of their persistent determination to press this matter upon the country. I appeal to them, I repeat, in their own interest and upon behalf of that party with which during my whole life I have been actively and politically allied. I am satisfied that I have done my duty and I leave the matter in the hands of parliament and the country, feeling that every man in this parliament is just as answerable for the result of the course he takes as I am, and I am answerable as they. Neither can shift upon the shoulders of the government the responsibility of this project. Every man must exercise his judgment according to his conscience and I claim the same privilege for myself."
